

RECORDS OF ENDURING VALUE

For general information, the following is a working list of the types of state and local records the State Archivist has identified as having enduring value to the public. These public records should never be destroyed and once they have become inactive (not of the current year or referenced on an average of once a month or more) they should be transferred to the State Archives. This list is not complete as new types of records are being created daily and not all of early Idaho record series have been identified. Before any public official authorizes the destruction of any record, the Idaho State Archives should be contacted to make sure the record in question does not have enduring value. The State Archivist can be reached at (208) 334-2620 or at rod.house@ishs.idaho.gov

Click on INDEX for a list of record series titles and on the following for a detailed description of each record series title.

To a DESCRIPTIVE LIST of records of enduring value.